

COURT SYMPATHY

WITH TWO LIMERICK

SOLICITORS

The sympathy of the Limerick District Court was tendered to-day by Justice Dermot F. Gleeson, to Mr. A. J. Blood-Smyth, solicitor, and Mr. Nial S. Gaffney, solicitor, on their recent bereavements.

Before beginning the business of the Liberties Court, Justice Gleeson referred to the great loss suffered by Mr. Blood-Smyth on the loss of his sister and by Mr. Gaffney, on the death of his mother.

"These were two greivous losses to two leading members of the Limerick solicitors' profession," said the Justice and I am sure all of you would like me to express my sympathy with them in their bereavements.

On behalf of the Solicitors' Profession, Mr. Dermot G. O'Donovan, solicitor, joined with the Justice. The two deceased ladies, he said, were a great loss to Limerick as well as to their respective relatives.

Mr. Liam Purcell, on behalf of the Court Registrar (Mr. Morgan Costello) and his staff, associated himself with the Court's expressions of sympathy.

COOKING IN AN OPEN HEARTH

Rev. D. Kelly, C.C., suggested at a meeting of the Clare Vocational Committee yesterday that girls should be taught how to cook properly by means of the open hearth, which was their home method. Many girls attended classes to learn how to cook for their own households, but they were familiar with the open hearth and were given instruction on range cooking.

Mr. K. Jennings, C.E.O. said it was quite easy to cook on the open hearth fire and the results were better. Even Christmas cakes were cooked on open hearths last Christmas and were very satisfactory.

Canon Vaughan (Chairman) suggested that instructresses be requested to give more attention to cooking by the open hearth method and this suggestion was adopted.

bought for £470 17s. and 21 stores costing £533. Over forty sheep were also purchased for £352 15s. Sales during the month were: 4 young boars at £88; 2 calved heifers at £66 10s.; and 6 yearling bulls at £219 10s.

Mr. Dillon, proposing the adoption of the Land Steward's report, asked if casual helpers had ever previously been employed on the farm.

The Manager said that on several previous occasions it had been necessary to employ casual workers. Their employment was rendered very necessary this year because of the discharge of so many patients.

The Land Steward's report was adopted unanimously.

SYMPATHY.

Sympathy was voted to Mr. P. Lillis, Co.C., on the death of his brother; to the Cross family, William Street, and to the Doyle family, O'Connell Avenue, on their recent bereavements.

HOW MANY GERMS IN A SNEEZE?

When Clare Vocational Committee yesterday agreed to co-operate in the National Film Unit's tour for the showing of health films, Very Rev. Canon Vaughan, Chairman of the Committee, said he had read an article recently, which asked how many germs were in a single sneeze. The answer was two millions. "I do not know" he added with a smile "how they managed to count them."

Druid's Circle at Limerick. O'Curry was silent for several minutes, then he suddenly burst out: "What grand old men are here if we could only see them." I looked at him and his ignorance I thought the party was getting queer. Then he said to him: "Where are the men of Eugene?" "These and these," he said, pointing to the stones.

FRIEND OF PETRIE.

How did Mr. O'Curry come into the limelight first? In a simple way. George Petrie, noted Irish archaeologist, author of "Irish Round Towers," came to Limerick Mental Hospital to see a friend of his. Before he got over the place he saw on the wall a neatly copied Irish manuscript. He inquired of Mr. Jackson, Superintendent, who told him Jackson replied that it was a very extraordinary ward. O'Curry. Straightaway O'Curry was appointed to the Ordnance Survey.

VERY HAPPY.

Mr. Frank Cowhey, who won £6,000 on the Derby by "Amour Drake," though quite happy, is taking his money philosophically. He had sold his share for £1,000 and, he does not regret having done so. Of course, there are some people who do not hesitate to say they made a big blunder by so doing. Frank is not in the least. After listening-in to the radio at home at 21 Prospect Road, he rushed away to St. Michael's Yacht Club, of which he is Vice-Captain, to keep a steady engagement with a man-of-war crew. He spent the afternoon on the placid waters of the "far away from the crowd."
