

AND HAD NO LIGHT

James Malone, 8 Arthur's Quay, Limerick, cycled to a fair at Abbeyfeale during the summer. Passing through Ardagh at night Sergeant Walsh pulled him up for riding an unlighted bicycle. Malone gave a number of wrong names and addresses, but eventually gave his correct name but a wrong address. It took the Limerick Guards two months to find him.

Malone was charged at Rathkeale District Court on Monday, before Justice Kenny with giving a wrong name and with riding an unlighted bicycle at night.

Sergt. Walsh told how Malone first said he was from Ennis, then from a number of other places. He had two friends with him, and after consulting with them he gave witness his correct name but a wrong address.

"The Guards in Limerick spent two months looking for him," the Sergeant said, "They were put to tremendous trouble and eventually traced him through the Labour Exchange."

The Sergeant said Malone told him that night that he was cycling to Abbeyfeale fair.

Justice—Well, I'll speed him there with a fine of £2.

Malone was not in Court.

IN IRISH ONLY

The City Engineer (Mr. C. Stenson, B.E.) said at the meeting of the City Council on Monday night that it was now possible to get enamel name plates for streets. An order had not yet been given for the plates, as it was only a few days ago that the names of the streets in Irish had been supplied.

The Manager said that the names of streets would be in Irish only. Originally it was agreed to have the names bilingual, but this decision was later upset in favour of having the names in Irish only.

NO INSURANCE: £20 FINE

A Navan farmer, William Tormey, of Mooretown House, was fined £20 at Navan District Court for having driven a motor cycle without insurance cover.

and such an embargo was most unfair. In the Post Office a lad could start as a boy messenger and become a post-master. He proposed that the Minister be asked to cancel the regulation.

Mr. Cusack seconded and said the regulation gave rise to many grievances.

The Manager said that the Minister had power under the 1931 Act to determine who was an officer and who was a servant. For the past two years Managers had been given powers to promote in certain circumstances, but only in respect of permanent officers. All permanent employees were regarded as officers, but servants of the Corporation often had advantages over officers in respect of wages.

Ald. Bourke said that every employee of the Corporation should be eligible for promotion.

Ald. Reidy's resolution was passed unanimously.

R.D.S. EXTENSION & LECTURES

As may be seen from our advertising columns, the first of this session's Royal Dublin Society Extension Lectures will be given at the Technical Institute on Friday next at 8 p.m. The lecturer on this occasion is the Rev. J. Hobson, M.A. Mr. Hobson is well known to Limerick audiences as he has lectured here on several occasions. His report on this occasion is "Ireland In Pictures."

The lecturer will use a selection from many hundreds of slides which he has made, showing the landscape beauties of this lovely country. They range from Donegal to Kerry and are accompanied by an interesting and amusing commentary, dealing with his various experiences as he travelled through the scenes which he has graphically depicted.
