VISITORS FROM PARIS

AND still they come! Following close on the heels of the foreign hostellers who visited the city early last week, and who were the guests of An Oige members, came two French visitors last week-end. Both hailed from Paris and are on a world hitch-hiking tour. They were lavish in their praise of the charm of Ireland, and the spirit of friendliness prevailing, and it was with an air of reluctance that they took their departure. Once again, without much ado, An Oige played the important role of imparting a true account of our Irish mode of life.
This is but one of the many instances where the organisation has proved itself invaluable in putting over a proper picture of Irish mannerisms on the outside world. If judged only from this viewpoint, it will be easily appreciated that the Irish Youth Hostel Association possesses immense possibilities, and ranks in the forefront of our great national and cultural bodies.
