

Individual farmers are ready and prepared if they have leadership. Hoped to help to make an organization of farmers in the county will endure and hold its own against all attacks from any quarter. It is the duty of every dairy farmer in the county, for himself and his family, to back this organization and to look after his own interests. "You are now asked," he "to produce milk at 1/- per gallon for the rest of the community at the expense of reducing his own standard of living to the level of any other section of the community."

ville. Fr. McAuliffe was educated at the Christian Brothers Schools, Charleville, and graduated from there to Clonliffe College, and later to Maynooth, where he had a distinguished course. On Monday he celebrated his first Mass in the Mercy Convent, Mallow, where his sister, Sister Cecilia, is a nun, and on Tuesday morning he celebrated Mass at the Mercy Convent, Charleville. He will minister in the Archdiocese of Dublin.

LIVED TO BE 94

The death took place at the fine old age of 94 years, of Mrs. Catherine Enright, Ballinabearna, Ardagh, Newcastle West. Member of a well-known and esteemed West Limerick family, deceased was widow of the late Timothy Enright, who pre-deceased her several years ago. A very popular and respected figure, the late Mrs. Enright was in almost perfect health up to six months ago or so. There was a large and representative attendance at the funeral, which took place on Wednesday from Ardagh Parish Church to the Churchtown Cemetery.

to fourteen years. In some of the cases those implicated worked in gangs and a quieting feature in this respect is that several of the young desperados involved seem to regard themselves as more or less "great fellows" through being entangled in the meshes of the law. It is all indicative of a lamentable situation, and how to deal with it effectively is a question that should at once occupy the minds of all thoughtful citizens.

Limerick, of course, is not the only place where there is a distressing wave of juvenile delinquency. The same deplorable trend is rife in every other city in Ireland and practically all the towns over the country. The position is much worse in England and Scotland but that fact is no satisfaction for our own people. The evil as it presents itself here is serious in the extreme and it has to be taken up in an active spirit with a view to finding an adequate and equitable remedy for it. Back of it all is a social problem of appalling difficulty and complexity.

Two world wars have produced a tragic loosening of conduct and a lowering of standards, and we in Ireland have by no means escaped the consequences of such general debasement. Family life has not nearly the restraining and safeguarding influence it formerly had and this deterioration could not be other than harmful and ruinous to young people. Practically every case of juvenile depravity can be traced back to lack of parental control. Hardly anything can
