Passing Of Limerick Volunteer

TRIBUTES FROM OLD COLLEAGUES

PRESIDING at a meeting of the Limerick City Regiment, Irish Volunteers (1916), Mr. Tom Pigott said it had been specially convened to enable the members to pay the last sad tribute to the memory of the late Paddy O'Hea, who, as they all knew, had been one of the most loyal and consistent members of the Regiment while it existed. To know Paddy was to like him, because while holding steadfastly to his convictions, his honesty and sincerity were so manifest that even those who held distinctly opposite views were disarmed. Looking back on those now distant days, when they had fared over a dark road together, they would recall how his cheery laughing disposition had helped to lighten the way.

THINNING RANKS.

He, the Chairman, would miss him very much, personally, because in recent years they were wont to talk of the old days when they soldiered together. As the years pass their ranks were being sadly depleted, as witness the recent passing of Paddy Walsh and Tom O'Brien. Still, he hoped that while even a few were left, they would meet to mark such sad occasions.

Messrs. Paddy Glynn, Ned Fitzgibbon, Jim Kirby and Tom Flynn having spoken in support of the Chairman's remarks, the members present paid the customary tribute to the passing of an Irish Volunteer who had paraded for active service on Easter Sunday, 1916.
