LAST LINK

WITH OLD-TIME TRADE

The last surviving link with the old-time coopering trade that once flourished in the town has been severed by the death of Mr. John Houlihan, of Maiden Street, Newcastle West, who passed away last week after a prolonged illness (writes our Newcastle West staff representative). Deceased, who had reached a very ripe old age, had been in failing health for some time past, but was in good health up to a year or two ago. "Jackie" Houlihan, as he was more intimately known amongst a wide circle of friends, was the last surviving member of his trade to have been engaged in the making of firkins for use in the extensive butter markets for which the town was once famous throughout Munster. Of a kindly and genial disposition, he was possessed of a rare and never-failing fund of humour, and his recollections of old-time days in the town were much sought after and enjoyed during his later years. He was also an expert angler, and was for over half a century a well-known figure on the banks of the Deel and its tributaries. The sympathy felt for the bereaved family in the town and district was exemplified by the large and representative attendance at the funeral, which took place from Newcastle West Church to Churchtown Cemetery.

THE TRUE BASIS

FOR LASTING PEACE

For five long, listless years they had been lulled to sleep, until to-day the world faced the greatest crisis in the history of civilisation, declared Cardinal Spellman, Arch-was vitally necessary for farmers to have a strong representative organisation as was now to be found in trade and practically all sections of the community. The object of the Association was to protect the interests of the dairy farmer, especially in view of the tendency to reduce the price of milk in the future. It would be grave to reduce the present price of milk without at the same time reducing the cost of production of all other commodities which would be purchased by the farmer. Furthermore, any reduction in the prices of agricultural products now have particularly serious consequences having regard to the heavy losses already sustained by the farmers owing to the unfavourable harvest.

THE PRESENT AVERAGE

He further expressed the hope that the average price of milk delivered to the creameries for the whole year worked out at 10s. per gallon, which was the price at which dairy farmers would be expected to produce milk economically at the present time. Dealing with the present rationing arrangements, he said he thought it was only fair to dairy farmers, as producers, to be allowed some extra for butter at the lower control price in view of the extra demand on their domestic ration by the casual extra labour they employ during the spring and summer periods.

Mr. B. McEnery, Manager of the Mahon Creamery, also spoke and paid a tribute to Mr. Lillis, an active and enthusiastic supporter of the development of such a representative organisation.

OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES

On the proposition of Mr. John Hough, seconded by Mr. James Flanagan, the meeting unanimously decided to form a branch of the organisation, and the following officers and committee were appointed:—Chairman, Mr. James Quaid; Hon. Secretary, Mr. James Cregan. Committee—Messrs. John Hough, Jer. O'Gorman, James and John Liston.

The Chairman proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Lillis, which was passed with acclamation.
