ably on present form if remain on the team.

O'Grady's team-mate, had a trial when Paddy retired but did not impress ever, he hardly got a fair chance he must have been famished side line and might make a try under kindlier circumstances.

Paddy Collopy stepped considerably on recent performance and vied with the master Duggan, for the limelight plenty to do and appeared in the hard work. He was covered by the veteran, D. Stokes, who gave his usual fine display, whilst Jim Sadler was a sound full-back.

The Dromcollogher defence, Broderick, should be capable of better than what we saw from a few efforts were above the ordinary and give hope of an improved display next day out. Dooley was easily the best half-backs and with more experience could be a force when the championship comes round again.

Mick Ryan had a difficult moment to subdue Josie Gallagher came through as good as the circumstances. Jimmy Cahill never really fitted into half back berth, from which O'Shea was missing and was in vain for the brilliant play put this player head and shoulders over "the field" in the county final.

Paddy Fitzgerald has not returned to olden form and was out of action during his short stay. He had retired with a jury well before the interval.

Derry McCarthy and Timmy Cahill were the hardest tried really poor scoring line, with Long another that gave some of making the grade when experience and a better sense of direction to his present quality.

Tom Boland is not a top player and it is useless playing him. I often thought that he would be a useful half-back if room could be found for him there. Mick Loran will not solve the full-back difficulty and seems unable to put his club prowess into the county arena.

The Chance To Experiment.
All hopes of Limerick success in the current League have vanished and the two remaining games, against Cork here in Limerick, and with the black and white lads, by Noreside, provide an opportunity to give a trial to promising material.

The Selection Committee should strike a bold note, keeping
