BISHOP OF WATERFORD ON THE PRESENT CRISIS. Speaking on the occasion of his triennial visitation at St. Peter and Paul's Church, Waterford, the Bishop of Waterford, Most Rev. Dr. Hackett, Bishop of Waterford, said he was at present going through a great crisis in the history of Ireland, but that crisis was not a religious one. The crisis that was at hand, and the cause which had God's blessing upon it, was the crisis of the hour. Hence in their honest efforts to secure for themselves the liberty which is a just and God-given right, they should be careful not to do anything which would bring upon themselves the anger of God, they need not fear. If they found an enemy, they need not have any fear. On the other hand, they should remember that it would not bring a blessing upon them and it would not bring the grace of God upon them if they were to do anything which would bring upon themselves the anger of God. They should be careful not to do anything which would bring upon themselves the anger of God. They should be careful not to do anything which would bring upon themselves the anger of God.
