When Peace Comes

If It's Listed Here-

You can depend on it. The goods advertised week by week in these an no uncements are the finest the country produces. Cut out the lists each week and shop from them in future.

WHEN peace finally reigns there will open for each of us the grand task of building up a great and prosperous Ireland.

We must buy, as far as we possibly can, only goods produced in Ireland. Every shilling spent on Irish products helps to ensure a prosperous future for our country and greater comfort for ourselves. .

When peace comes it will be more than ever necessary to buy Irish goods. Begin now. Ask for the articles named below., They are made by the foremost Irish manufacturers. You cannot get better.

SIGNIFICANT DISMISSAL

No Appeal Against Non-Statutory Authority

Holding that the military court in question was not a court in any legal sente, and that therefore a writ of prohibition did not lie, the House of Lords yesterday dismissed the appeal of Patrick Offord and Michael C'Sullivan, of Mitchelatows, who challenged the jurisdiction of a military court at Oork, by which both men had been sentenced to death, It was held that an order of prohibition sould not be granted restraining Generals Macready and Sulekland from continuing and dariging out the sentences. Viscount Cave said there was no precedent or the lague of it writ against a brdy which had no stantory or common law authority The

MUNSTER FAIR

Naturally following the more than abnormal imas through which we have been passing the holding of the Great Maneter Fair was welcomed during the week. The fair in a general souse ogaid hardly have been expensed to come up to representative original properslone, and the drough; had a very deteriorating effect on transactions. At the same time the opinion of all concerned agrees that under the existing ofreumstances iswas largely satisfactory. As was to be expected it was small as regards cassle, and there was a marked symptom if cathloganessa although prices were fairly well maintained, and considering everything an apward tondency was observable in comparison with existing prices. So far as horses were concarned prices were on the low side, and there sermed to be a desire to get rid of animals. Judging the fair from all points, and taking into sonsideration all the circumstances, there is nothing to be expressed but satisfiction and contentment at the jurn of events was manifest. A few details as to prices are so far available. The castle and sheep fair was up to the average and for fit stook and finished animals there was a somewhat good demand. The fair was not, however, sould so anticipations what with foreign imports, the coal siring and other recent disturbing taffaences across channel, mutton sold as its 2d to is 61 per lb on foot, and beef at 80; to 70s per own. For all classes prices were down as compared with those of the February and March fairs. Kat cowe sold as low as £25; three year olds, E25 to £28, and year lings showed a falling off

Father Bernard Vaughan, & J. one of the moss remarkable and learned members of the great Order to which he belonge, gives the following very wise and deep reaching counsel so married people Tha "Catholic Ragister." under the tiste "Father Bernard Vaughan's Advice to Married Purple "quotes the eminent and of quene Jeanis as follows :- To the Has oand : Be alad and shoughtni to your wife. Bear with her little femining ways. Naver attempt to check the dawing side of her saik Tals is a cardinal rais : Whatever else you may try to check in your wife never check her chasser. Remember a woman needs many safety vaives and cutiets for her temperament. Be patient and sender with her. Don't say sharp and inol oos sd anch has sands polisted of speaking your mind and saying what you mean and meaning what you say, as one having authority. Consider the sensitive. character of a woman's disposition, and henour her in every possible way. Dun's be hasty, but bear yourself with that manliness which will never cause a woman pain. Faraher than all this; I would not the hasband not to be orreioss of the little likes and disshould be put into boiling water once a week, likes if h's wife. They are a part make the bristles clean and tough, and render Most women have a passion for fluery in some form or other; jewellery or dress, or both Well, give her what you can even if it cost you some sacrifice and les her feel la la from you, and that you have not given ber what has cost you nothing. Praise her, and make much of her, and abyveall, remember that a woman's chicas for sympachy is like that (f a flower for sanshine. Li you are always at the cino, if you are never thinking of her, if you migleon to write when away from her, citiers may come and effer her what you withhold, Cover them over with the white of an egg and who will then be to blame f If saything and place shem on a shelf to dry, but do not let | goes wrong to married life, I usually put (h) blame on the man He is the seronger and h; should overcome himself and proteor the wife of his hears, lending her a strong arm on which to lean. To the wife : - Frit, and special y. I would remind her that she must keep the bems in good order. Man appreciates a beautiful home, possibly even more shan a woman does, because he is in it less. Let the sun stream bbrough your windows upon rooms sastefully arranged, and bearing from kitchen to attio the braces of a true wifely devotion to the house And keep a good sabir. There is very much in that. Even in the Christian man there is much of the animal. Let is be impossible for any invidious distinction to be drawn between meals cut and meals at home. The dinner may be simple, but ies it be good and het, and dain thy served. Les she wife, soo always remember to be near and smart, even when she is quite alone with her hasband. A man likes to see his wife well surved ous, and is is ber business to look pleasing in his eyes. Many women dress so look batter than other women, and consequently they over dress. Let ber consult his taste tather than that of her modiste. Do not get into the habit of contradicting all your husband's charished views, from mere perversity; but study to gratify, within reasonable limits, his whims and fancies Waman has no monopuly of fads. Nover offer him lams and impose ble excuses. Be frank and abave-board in everything, and cudeavour as far as you can not to keep him walling about while you charge your dress or put on your things. Try to make the wheels of life's charlot ran smoothly. Never preach at your husband, never usg, never scold in at all. public, never 'ory on purpose." These tricks of women often bring them what they want ; but they may, in the process kill a busband's ove. No man wants so be seased, no man wants to be pestered; and no wife gains in the

Master of Kells' Decision

Some British Comments

Many of the British newspapers comment on the decision given in the case of Mosess Egan and Higgins by the Master of the Rolls in the Chancery Division, Dablin, on Tassday. "The judgment, if it stands, invalidates the whole of whit the military course have done, although it cannot restore tife where men have been abot or hanged by order of those courts. which are found to be wholly illegal in their " waten 'O zaten' malen' Was ". not milenco." "The findings are a satisfaction to some of us, who have consistently held shat the law could be no obber than it is now declared to be by the Master of the Rolls. The simple. point is that, state of war or no state of war, the subjects of the King cannot be deprived of the protection given them by the common and statute law of the B itish Constitution. The whole position is a warning as to what happens when a military junta is given exceptional powers. Almost as a matter of course it moss beyond those powers. We cannot argue that the findings in any particular case would have been different had a courtmartial been properly constituted, but the men tried would at least have been legally judged and would have had whatever protestion the law could give shem."
